5 Signs Your Dog Needs a Vet Today

Don't ignore these warning signals

1

Refusing Food for 24+ Hours

If your dog skips more than two consecutive meals, it could indicate pain, nausea, or an underlying condition that needs professional evaluation. [SOURCE NEEDED]

2

Sudden Lethargy or Weakness

A normally active dog becoming unusually tired, reluctant to move, or struggling to stand may be experiencing a serious health issue. Seek veterinary attention promptly.

[SOURCE NEEDED]

3

Difficulty Breathing

Rapid, laboured, or noisy breathing, persistent coughing, or blue-tinged gums are emergency signs. Do not wait — visit a vet or call an animal ambulance immediately. [SOURCE NEEDED]

4

Repeated Vomiting or Diarrhoea

Occasional stomach upset may pass, but repeated episodes (more than 2–3 times in a day), especially with blood, require veterinary assessment to rule out infection, toxicity, or obstruction. [SOURCE NEEDED]

5

Swelling, Limping, or Visible Pain

Unexplained swelling, guarding a body part, yelping when touched, or sudden limping can indicate fractures, joint issues, infections, or insect stings that need diagnosis.

[SOURCE NEEDED]

Don’t Wait — Find a Vet Now

Search trusted veterinary care near you

Visit Practo for Animals

This content is for educational awareness only and is not a substitute for professional veterinary advice.